FRONTISPIECE

"There's a little green gate--"

Bennettsville is located on the LaFayette Highway from Raleigh to Savannah via Fayetteville. It is also on State Highway 9, ten miles south east from its junction - between Rockingham, N. C. and Cheraw, S. C. - with U. S. Highway 1.

As we begin today, the tenth of February, to type the pages of what will be our fourth price list, the new growth of the Bearded varieties of Iris is just beginning to show. The Beardless ones are still sleeping under their heavy coverings of last year's stalks and leaves. There have been casualties during the past year of unprecedented heavy and constant rains, but the garden as a whole looks promising and the zest of returning springtime is in the air and in our garden-loving soul.

Fortunately all our high-priced additions have come through the winter well and nearly all give indication of probable bloom. Sir Michael and Dauntless will not bloom, but Persia, Indian Chief, Glowing Embers, Vesper Gold, Blue Velvet, Valencia, Cardinal, Mauna Loa, Dolly Madison and Frieda Mohr. give every promise of doing so. There are altogether in the garden fifty new varieties, among them some fine Japanese of proved value and hardiness. These will lengthen the Iris blooming season, as they come when the Tall Bearded are almost gone. The fine porcelain blue Spuria hybrid, Mrs. A. W. Tait, and the glorious species Ochroleuca, with large ivory white flowers and stems sixty inches tall, also Ensata, a pale gray-blue flowered species from Russia, should show their blossoms for the first time in the garden this year.

We have quantities of the best known and liked standard varieties of Bearded Iris and our prices on these are extremely low. Please, if you have not acres of Iris already, plan to buy enough for long borders and masses of these cheaper ones and also enough for the cut flower garden. You will enjoy the blended shades of a great armful of Iris in your favorite crystal jar.

Prices as given are for standard size roots, correctly labelled and true to name. We begin shipping last of May or first of June and ship continuously through the year until the immediate approach of the blooming season again. Dutch Iris bulbs we ship about Oct. 1st and Beardless varieties together with Hemerocallis in late Fall, Winter or early Spring.

ROOTS WILL GO BY EXPRESS. IF WANTED PARCEL POST ADD FIVE PER CENT TO ORDER. Small number of roots go more cheaply by Parcel Post; larger orders by express.

---Gabrielle Drake McColl

Relative time of blooming is indicated by E for early, M for mid-season, and L for late; comparative height is indicated by t for tall, m for medium, and l for low. Numerals are first the Exhibition and second the Garden rating as given in the last Symposium of the American Society.

Collection D: 100 Flags, White and Purple, mixed or separate $4.50

HARDY ASTERS: Ten varieties in shades of blue, rose, pink, purple, and white at 15 cts. each, $1.00 per dozen. Bloom in late summer and early Fall and are very effective in the garden both for borders and against shrubbery. Shipment in early Spring.

The best time to divide and transplant the Bearded Iris is after the blooming season, with us in June and July, though these Iris can be safely planted at any time. Plant them in good garden soil, in well drained and sunny location, or at least where they will have some direct sun each day. Some varieties such as Alcazar, Quaker Lady, Wyomissing, Lohengrin, Glory of Hillegom, Navajo, Nine Wells, Fairy, Pauline-Child's, Queen Alexandra, do quite well in considerable shade.

Fertilize liberally with Bone Meal at time of planting and add lime to soil if it is acid and sour. Lime is excellent for the Iris beds at all times.

Bearded Iris planted too deep will not bloom! Let the top of the rhizome show the least bit above ground and the small roots go deep. Keep dead leaves and litter away, letting the rhizomes catch the blaze of the summer sun.

Some varieties are temperamental and refuse to bloom the first season after moving; the chances are better for June and July transplanting.

While we advise June and July buying and planting of Bearded Iris, the rhizomes are not so large as later in August and September, also there is great variation in the size of rhizomes of different varieties. Susan Bliss, Lady Byng and Zwannenburg for instance are very small, while Pallida, Lent A. Williamson and Crusader are very large.

Names of those who would be interested in having this catalog would be gratefully received.
